

North Carolina College at Durham Collection (AC90)

Introduction:

North Carolina College at Durham (now North Carolina Central University) was a historically black college. The collection contains two yearbooks, one from 1968 and one from 1969.

Descriptive Summary:

Creator: FIC

Title: North Carolina College at Durham Collection

Date Range: 1968-1969

Size: 0.42 linear feet (1 boxes)

Collection Number: AC90

Donor Information:

Found in Collection.

Citation Note:

North Carolina College at Durham Collection (AC90), Black Archives of Mid-America, Kansas City, Missouri.

Related Collections:

Arkansas AM&N Collection (AC92)

Administrative Information:

Reproduction Restrictions: Unrestricted.

Access Restrictions: Unrestricted.

Biographical Sketch:

North Carolina Central University, as the university is called now, was originally founded in 1910 by a wealthy Black man. In 1915 it was sold and became a National Training School; 8 years later, it was reorganized to be a school for liberal arts education as well as for educator training. Later, it would be renamed to North Carolina College at Durham, and later North Carolina Central University, the name it brands today.

Scope and Content Note:Series 1: Yearbooks

This series contains two yearbooks from right before the college changed its name. The yearbooks are in relatively good condition, with any issues only being seen on the outside covers of the yearbooks.

Collection InventorySeries 1: Yearbooks

- f. 1 Class of 1968 Yearbook
- f. 2 Class of 1969 Yearbook

Processed by David Rocha, AmeriCorps VISTA, May 2024.

Sources:

North Carolina Central University. (n.d.). Our Heritage. Our Heritage | North Carolina Central University. Accessed May 15, 2024. <https://www.nccu.edu/we-are-nc-central/our-heritage>.